

Age-appropriate sexual behaviours

Sex play and sexual behaviour is normal in children and young people. Age-appropriate behaviours do not require intervention by carers and professionals. Children can readily be distracted from these behaviours. The accompanying emotions and expressions of age-appropriate sexual play include laughter, spontaneity, curiosity and experimentation.

Concerning sexual behaviours

Some behaviours signal the need to watch for the frequency and persistence of these behaviours. If a child or young person exhibits several of these behaviours, or they continue despite clear requests to stop, seek advice from child protection or your agency.

Very concerning sexual behaviours

There are behaviours that are indicative of very concerning sexual behaviour. Most of these behaviours require immediate professional advice, particularly if they are accompanied by secrecy, anxiety, tension, coercion, force, compulsion and threats. Some of the behaviours listed become criminal offences when the child reaches the age of criminal responsibility (10 years of age in Victoria, Australia). Criminal offences require immediate reporting to the police.

For more information on these behaviours, see the Age appropriate sexual behaviour in children and young people chart on the South Eastern Centre Against Sexual Assault (SECASA) website at <<https://www.secasa.org.au/>> or contact your local Centre Against Sexual Assault (CASA). See the list on page 3 of this factsheet or visit CASA for further information at <<https://www.casa.org.au/>>.

Sexual abuse behaviour treatment services

Sexually Abusive Behaviour Treatment Services (SABTS) operate across Victoria. SABTS are funded by the department to provide therapeutic treatment to children and their families, to address problem sexual behaviour and sexually abusive behaviour. SABTS work with the child or young person, their family, carers, school and community services to provide an assessment and developmentally appropriate therapeutic response. SABTS are funded to provide therapeutic treatment for up to 24 months, either in a voluntary capacity, or via a statutory Therapeutic Treatment Order (TTO). SABTS services are available to young people under the age of 15 years who exhibit problem sexual behaviour or sexually abusive behaviour. Some agencies also offer treatment programs for young people up to and including 17 years.

The Act enables child protection to receive reports regarding problem sexual behaviour and sexually abusive behaviours of a child aged between 10 years and 14 years. Under the Act, child protection can seek a TTO be granted by the Children's Court, to direct a young person with sexually abusive behaviours to attend an appropriate SABTS treatment program.

Child protection can also support a family to ensure that a child or young person aged 10 years to 14 years attends a SABTS program voluntarily, if appropriate.

SABTS can receive referrals from families, child protection, schools and other community organisations regarding a child exhibiting sexually abusive behaviour, or problem sexual behaviour.

SABTS employ skilled clinicians who use their clinical judgement to develop an effective treatment plan for the child or young person. The plan will consider issues that may impact the family maintaining treatment over a longer period. SABTS may also provide outreach services in some metropolitan and regional areas to ensure treatment accessibility for children with sexually abusive behaviours and their families.

The therapeutic responses provided include a focus on child development, attachment and trauma, and are inclusive of the family. SABTS treatment maximises opportunities for the child or young person to understand their behaviours and the harm caused, to prevent further harm in the future.

For further information and a list of SABTS providers see the Child Protection Manual <<https://www.cpmanual.vic.gov.au/advice-and-protocols/specialist-resources/therapeutic-treatment-resources/sexual-abuse-behaviour>>.
